“Mental Health in the Context of Family Events and Transitions”

Dr. Jonathan Wörn is a researcher at the 'Centre for Fertility and Health,' which is part of the Norwegian Institute of Public Health in Oslo.

He holds a PhD in sociology from the University of Cologne. His main research interests revolve around mental health and how it is affected by family and work-related events.

In his current work, he utilizes Norwegian full-population register data and various surveys, including the Survey of Health, Ageing and Retirement in Europe (SHARE).

On February 20, he will present on "Mental Health in the Context of Family Events and Transitions." In his presentation, he will give an overview of his recent research on how partnership initiation, relationship break-ups, single motherhood, and teenage depression affect the mental health of the family.
